TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

Minutes of a Special Meeting Held Wednesday Night.

A special meeting of the town council was held Wednesday night.

The mayor and treasurer were authorized to issue cheques in favor of W. Saunders for $27—two months' salary, as certified by the board of health; also to issue cheques for pay roll of board of works amounting to $127.75.

Mr. osenthal, representing a circus company, was granted a rebate of $50 on license rate to show here.

A cheque for $50 was authorized to be issued to Ole Scolin for building sidewalk on Julia st.

The bylaw to amend bylaw No. 105 was read a first time.

The bylaw to levy rate of taxation for the year 1901 received its second and third readings and was finally adopted. It provides that the rate shall be 30 mills for public school supporters, and 20 mills for separate school supporters. In the west ward—Norman—it will be 20 3/10 mills for public school supporters and 10 3/10 mills for separate school supporters.

The bylaw to raise $10,000 for water works purposes received its second reading, and on discussion in committee the amount was increased to $20,000.

The council is considering the advisability of buying 6 acres of land adjoining Coney Island park, ex-Mayor McCarthy having made a reasonable offer.

St. Alban's Sunday School Picnic.

The senior classes of St. Alban's Sunday school were given an excursion to Robertson's Island on Tuesday afternoon on the Daisy Moore, by the teachers and officers. They had a delightful sail and the picnic on the island was one of solid enjoyment and fun. Various amusements were provided, and in the competitions the following were successful:

Girls under 12—1st, Workbox, L. Malush; 2nd, Game, A. Pope.

White; 2nd, purse, Miss Finlayson; 3rd, Game, G. Wilmot.

Boys under 12—1st Knife, A. Horswill; 2nd, Lantern, H. Parsons.

Boys under 10—1st, Lantern, H. Hiliard; 2nd, Pencil case, V. Bunn.

Boys under 8—1st, Baseball, L. Coughlin; 2nd, Sailboat, W. Graham; 3rd, Ball, R. Woods.

Boys' open race—1st, Knife, W. Williams; 2nd, Pencil case, T. Leggo.

Three Legged Race—1st, Baseballs; A. Horswill and C. Woods; 2nd, Mouth organs, E. Malush and C. Pope.

Civic Holiday.

The council in their wisdom turned down a petition for a civic holiday on Friday, August 2, on the ground that September 4—the date of the championship sculling race—would be more satisfactory. We have no doubt but that every one would take a half holiday or a couple of hours on that occasion at any rate, but seeing that Labor day comes on the Monday before it will make two full holidays in one week. This is a little more than the average business man can stand. A couple of hours during the progress of the great race would be all that is required on that occasion. Labor day is a recognized Dominion statute holiday and cannot be changed, and it is surely not advisable to have a shifting civic holiday placed in the same week. Matters of this kind which involve the business community should be given a little more consideration by the council before being turned down at the suggestion of any particular member possessed of a "bright idea."

Disciples Sunday School Picnic.

The Disciples of Christ church Sunday school children enjoyed a very pleasant outing yesterday on the str. Sport and barge on the Winnipeg river. Leaving the dock about 10 a.m. they sailed down the river, most of those on board being surprised at the magnitude of the stream, which is very wide in places and quite picturesque. About noon the party landed on one of the numerous islands that dot the river and discipline like participated in an ample feast, served on a long stretch of linen. After doing full justice to the meal the boat whistle summoned the party on board and they continued down the river to the Dalles, where berry-picking and sight-seeing were indulged in by everybody for a couple of hours. Leaving the Dalles about 4 p.m. the boat returned by another channel, where narrow gorges and eddying currents were in marked contrast to the placid magnificence of the downward trip. An organ

TOWNS HAS SAILED.

His Money is Deposited and all Doubt at Rest as to the Great Race to Take Place at Rat Portage, Wednesday, Sept. 4th—Mail and Empire Eulogizes Gaudaur.

Although Towns had agreed to the articles of agreement in regard to the race for the championship some doubt has existed here as to whether he would sail on the 5th or not and also as to whether he had deposited his money to the credit of the Toronto Evening Telegram to cover Gaudaur's deposit of two weeks ago. Gaudaur has not been certain of this and he was averse to continue training if Towns was likely to back out at the last minute. To set at rest these doubts THE MINER wired this morning to the Evening Telegram as follows:

Rat Portage July 26th 1901.
EVENING TELEGRAM
Toronto.—
Has Towns sailed and put up his deposit?

EDITOR MINER.
To this we got a reply from Toronto as follows:

Toronto July 26th 1901.
THE MINER.
Rat Portage.—

"Yes."
EDITOR TELEGRAM.
This removes the last doubt as to the great race, and it is quite likely Towns accompanied by his barker will be in Rat Portage within two weeks. We hope he will be cordially received by the citizens of Rat Portage.

Champion Gaudaur takes regular practice spins around Coney Island twice every day in the morning and afternoon—and is now in splendid form. He is getting his weight down to near the limit and is looking in perfect rowing condition. During a spin yesterday, with Jack Hackett as a coach, he made the best time since he commenced practising for the race.

It now begins to look as if we may have more than one race, as it is said that Edward Hanlan Ten Eyck has expressed his determination to challenge the winner of the Towns-Gaudaur contest. He is a young man and won the amateur championship race of America at Philadelphia the other day, and apparently now wishes to enter the professional ranks. His father worthy pursuit—be it arms, or art, or song, or learning, or law, or rowing, deserves well of his country, and this Jacob Gaudaur has done, with much ability, much manliness, and much modesty. Again and again has he striven for the honor of Canada on distant waters. He has disarmed jealousy by the frankness and fairness of his character. No unworthy suspicion has ever tainted his fair fame. At 43 years of age he is an example of a fine man and a worthy citizen, respected in the town in which he lives and a pattern to the muscular young men of his neighborhood. No excess or dissipation has stained his career. His temperance, his self-command, and his purposeful determination have enabled him adequately to fill out what was possible to him in his particular line. A race does not take long. The forthcoming race at Rat Portage that will attract thousands from all over the Dominion will be an affair of so many minutes. But the men who contest it can look back on a lifetime of preparation. For Gaudaur there has been the boyhood at Orillia, the waking to the fact that he could be a great rower and the persistent following up of his opportunity, the denial of sluggishness, the keeping up of hope, the dogged British inability of knowing when he was beaten. It will be a great race, and there is no place in the world quite so good as Rat Portage for it. There we have, in Rat Portage bay, a course which immediately takes the eye of any onlooker. As for the spectators, they are surrounded by a natural amphitheatre of jutting headlands, and if the entire population of all the cities in Canada attended the event there would be no need to put up the notice, "standing room only," at any rate if visitors were content to sit on the seats provided by nature in the rocks and surrounding hillsides. Among the other questions that will be decided will be to what extent a man of forty-three may be considered in the prime of his strength. There are men of that age who are beginning to succumb to laziness and adipose tissue. They should make up their minds to go and see Gaudaur row.

Kianon's diver at Big Fork, fell from a log and immediately sank. His brother plunged after him and brought him to the surface, putting him across two logs. The boys separated and again he sank. His body was not found for eight hours after.

Notre Dame Church Picnic.

The picnic to Saultana Island Wednesday under the auspices of Notre Dame Church was largely attended. The str. Shamrock and barge conveyed the excursion to the grounds, one in the morning and one in the afternoon.

The program consisted of various amusements and games, together with an excellent supper. The contest between Miss Julia Desole, representing Norman, and Miss Inez Lynch, representing Rat Portage was brought to a finish with the result that Rat Portage won. The proceeds will be devoted to the worthy object of making needed repairs at the cemetery. The excursionists returned to town about 11 p.m. well pleased with the outing.

DIED BROKEN-HEARTED.

Windsor Girl Quarrelled With Father and Then Took Poison.

Windsor, Ont., July 22.—On Saturday afternoon Louise Marguerite, the 17-year-old daughter of John Gall of McEwan avenue, got permission to visit a friend near Sandwich. Not returning in the evening, search was made for her that night, and continued on Sunday. It resulted in finding her body in a cornfield near her home on Sunday afternoon.

She had committed suicide by swallowing a large quantity of Paris green. The girl bore a good reputation. She had had trouble with her father on Saturday, and was also despondent because of the absence of her lover. The inquest will be held tomorrow night.

MINING MEN'S CONVENTION.

Fourth Annual Meeting of the International Congress at Boise.

Boise, Idaho, July 23.—The fourth annual session of the international congress began in this city today. The object of the congress is to stimulate forms of mining, not only those for gold and silver, but also for all other kinds of minerals. It aims to secure better recognition of the mining industry from the government, to bring about needed changes in federal mining laws and to cultivate friendly feeling and co-operation among those interested in the search for minerals. Delegates were in attendance from nearly every state and territory of the union, and also from Canada and Mexico, New Mexico, Colorado, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Idaho, Wyoming, Missouri, California, Illinois and Arizona were especially well represented. The present congress will give special attention to the consideration of ways and means for securing the creation of a cabinet department devoted to mines and mining.

In conjunction with the gathering, there is being held an elaborate exhibit of ores, mining machinery, etc.

Brave Boy's Death.

Winnipeg Telegram.—About 1 o'clock this morning the death occurred under peculiarly sad circumstances of Herbert Hall, the eldest son of J. B. Hall, manager of the carpet department of the Hudson's Bay company.

Deceased, who was about 12 years of age, was with little Alex. MacKenzie, when the latter was drowned, and his death was due to exposure incurred while attempting to rescue his drowning companion. No effect of the boy's immersion was noticed until last Wednesday.

The funeral will take place at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon from his father's residence, Park View, opposite Elm park.

Paragraphs of the Oarsmen.

Ottawa News-Letter.—"Edward Ten Eyck won the single scull championship of America at Philadelphia on Saturday. The clever Worcester man will go to Rat Portage to see the Gaudaur-Towns race and will challenge the winner. There was a great deal of talk during the regatta on the coming race, with the general impression that it was all Gaudaur's."

Here's congratulations to our fellow countrymen, the champion oarsmen of America, the sturdy Argonauts of Toronto. Canada has long been noted for her oarsmen and scullers, and has turned out many champions of whom she may be proud. Rowing is coming back to public favor again in this city, the home of champions; for former years, and it may be that Hamilton will again come to the front. May it be so. In the meantime Hamiltonians will join heartily in the praises of the successful oarsmen of other Canadian cities.—Hamilton Times.

Edward Hanlan Ten Eyck says he will challenge the winner of the Gaudaur-Towns match at Rat Portage.—Toronto Star.

Capt. Barker, coach of the champion Argonauts, says: "It was an easy race. They caught the water first, but on the third stroke the Argos were even, and on the fifth they had a lead. They never caught us or gave us any trouble. At the one and a quarter mile point was the best race of the day. The Winnipeg crew caught them and chopped them to pieces. They were dead, and acknowledged that we had beaten them fairly, yet one miserable Philadelphia sheet came out and said the Vespers' boat had collided with a log, and that the Argonauts had won on a fluke. The Vespers' boat did not have a drop of water in it when it finished, and they were never in trouble. They were afraid of us from the start over there, and you could get an even-money bet. They wanted 3 to 1. There was $1,000 of Canadian money there, but only about $500 went down. We have got to go to Henley next year and win there, and then we will quit the game."

VALUE OF LEASING SYSTEM

Many Colorado Districts Owe Their Present Good Standing to it.

The practice of leasing mines and parts of mines is an integral part of the mining industry, writes Gen. Frank Hall in the Denver Post. It has attained so strong a place in the general system as to make it an indispensable adjunct to the development of the country. Leasers will succeed when well organized companies fail. A very large portion of our paying mines have been made so by the skill and pushing energy of this class of operators. To begin with, they are able to secure a full day's work from their employees. Again, the economies are more carefully looked after. Whatever they accomplish is for the direct benefit of the country. The leaser is almost invariably an industrious man, who is his own manager. He has no high salaried officers to support. He is on duty early and late and knows by personal contact with his men exactly what is going on in every part of the workings.

Scotch Cripple Creek near Leadville, Gilpin, Clear Creek, Boulder nor the San Juan divisions would have attained the standing they now occupy without the aid of leasers. In scores and hundreds of cases, they have been the pioneers and trail blazers of development. If all the mines in Colorado were worked by this method it is doubtful if we would ever hear of a labor strike of large proportions. Yet it would not be best for that system to obtain full control. The practice as it exists at the present time is better for all concerned, for the two methods move along in harmony.

The contract system, which forms still another element of the business, is by no means new. It has been more or less employed all over the state for many years, and has been very useful. But it cannot be well adapted to all classes of mines. If it could, it would soon take the place of day's pay men in all the larger properties. The illustration we gave the other day of its effects in the Center Star and War Eagle mines of Rossland, B. C., is a remarkable evidence of its value to the owner and to the men themselves. In comparison with the method of day's pay work the amount accomplished was nearly doubled, and the men made higher wages. If this illustration would follow every case it would be to the advantage of every mine owner at once to adopt the contract system. As these experiments increase, showing like or approximately favorable results, its extension is sure to follow.

Delegates were in attendance from nearly every state and territory of the union, and also from Canada and Mexico, New Mexico, Colorado, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Idaho, Wyoming, Missouri, California, Illinois and Arizona were especially well represented. The present congress will give special attention to the consideration of ways and means for securing the creation of a cabinet department devoted to mines and mining.

In conjunction with the gathering, there is being held an elaborate exhibit of ores, mining machinery, etc.

INDISCREET DOCTOR PUNISHED.

Fined and Assessed Damages for Talking of Consumptive Patient.

Paris, July 22.—Dr. Pader, of Bois-Colombes, has just been condemned for a peculiar cause to pay 1,000 francs damage to a patient named Legarde and a 200 franc fine.

The patient was suffering from a persistent cough and consulted Dr. Pader, who diagnosed tuberculosis and proposed the means to cure. Some time afterwards in the course of a conversation with M. Legarde's prospective mother-in-law the doctor stated that the man could not survive the following spring, which led to the match being broken off.

In awarding the damages the court explained that this modest amount had been fixed because hope remains of the marriage being concluded, other doctors having pronounced that there is no tuberculosis.

SNEEZE AND NEARLY DEAD.

Remarkable Injury to Master of Stratford Collegiate.

Stratford, Ont., July 22.—A sneeze very nearly caused the death of W. W. Nichol, mathematical master in the Listowel high school, and whose home is in this city. He was in Toronto the latter part of last week, and flurt his side on board a street car.

On Saturday evening a violent sneeze resulted in fracturing a rib and rupturing the pleura. Severe agony ensued, and for several hours Mr. Nichol's life was despaired of. He is now considered out of danger.

RAT PORTAGE, ONT., JULY 24, 1901

CANADIAN JUSTICE.

Spokane Spokesman-Review: Some people in this country may at times be disposed to question Canadian law or to criticize Canadian methods of government, but there has certainly been no reason to find fault with the manner in which the Dominion deals with criminals, no matter what their station or the character of their wrongdoing may be. The felon is given short shrift across the line. His case is not tossed from court to court while he is fattening in jail and his counsel is searching for new legal technicalities through which justice may be defrauded. When a crime is committed in the Dominion the person or persons who committed it are apprehended. This may be the work of a day or it may be the work of years. Certain it is that the authorities do not relax in their efforts to run down the guilty parties, and when they are once in custody there is no delay before bringing them to trial where, if found guilty, they are sentenced to a punishment commensurate with the offense.

There is no better example of Canadian thoroughness in dealing with criminal matters than that furnished by the story of the capture and trial of one George O'Brien, who has just been sentenced to death at Dawson, Yukon territory. During the winter of 1899-1900 three young men started out over the ice from the Klondike capital. They were last seen at a station called Minto, some distance above the junction of the Yukon and the Pelly. Foul play was suspected and the Canadian mounted police and detectives set about to unravel the mystery. All of the young men were Americans, but nationality counted for nothing. The authorities believed a crime had been committed and they were determined to bring the guilty parties to justice. All the trails in the vicinity of Minto were thoroughly searched; every person in the vicinity at the time was questioned, and those who acted suspiciously—O'Brien among them—were taken into custody. There had been heavy falls of snow, but an attempt was made to locate the scene of the supposed murder. One hundred and ten days were spent in determining where the outrage had been committed. It was thought that the bodies had been dropped into the river, and three acres of ice were blown up in the hope of finding them. Detectives came out to the kenzie, was placed in position on Parliament Hill, between the Cartier monument and the Summer House last week. It is the joint production of Hamilton McCarthy and Philippe Herbert, the Canadian sculptors. The pedestal is fourteen feet high, and the statue nine feet.

Manitoba and Ontario.

The Toronto Mail and Empire in a recent editorial said:

"If Manitoba's splendid crop prospects are fully realized, the harvest will give a great lift to the trade of this province. A surplus of at least 40,000,000 bushels of wheat for export seems not too much to expect from the present favoring conditions. Already the outlook has given a quickening impulse to industry in Ontario. Our manufacturers of agricultural implements are busy turning out self-binders and other harvest machinery, and tools to ship to the Northwest. There will be many train loads of them needed to handle the present crop, and there will be no stint of money to pay for them if that crop is all that it promises to be. But the market is no less tempting to the American manufacturers of harvest implements, and their competition will probably be keener than ever. They no longer hesitate, as they once did, to sell on time to our Northwestern farmers. Stoves, tinware, granite ware, boots and shoes, clothing, etc., are lines in which there will be heavy shipments, and upon which many hands have been employed in this province on Manitoba account. An increasing trade is being done from year to year in those articles and those grades of articles which do not come under the head of necessities. For many of the extras and luxuries of life Manitoba can not afford to pay large sums every year. Thus our manufacturers of fine furniture, of musical instruments, etc., are working upon Manitoba orders. Both our manufacturers and long-wholesale merchants have had to take chances as to the season's trade in the Northwest, in advance of any information afforded by the state of the fields. Their enterprise cannot wait until the crop bulletins begin to appear. Before the seed is in the ground their travellers are busy and abroad, taking the measure of the coming demand. But our business men prepare for their Manitoba trade every year with increasing confidence. They trust the good land and the industrious farmers to give a profitable account of themselves every season, and make arrangements for business accordingly. When the crop is ready millions of dollars will be required to remove it. This will be furnished chiefly by our eastern banks, whose earnings will be thereby increased and the value of their stocks correspondingly enhanced for their shareholders. Not only will the holders of bank stocks be likely to see that part of their property appreciated as a result of the harvest in Mani-

Apollinaris

BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTIONS.

Recently there have been several cases of prominent men suddenly falling in collapse just after eating a hearty meal. These men have all been under treatment for gastric "trouble," and yet the results show that the treatment they had received had smothered the symptoms but had not retarded the progress of the disease.

There is a real danger in the use of palliatives when there is disease of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition. The disease in such cases goes on, while the distressing symptoms alone are stopped. Presently, like a smothered fire, the disease breaks out in new places, involving heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, or some other organ.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery results in a radical cure of diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc., when the disease of these organs has its origin in the diseased condition of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system.

"I will tell you what myself and family think of your medicine," writes Mr. M. M. Wardwell, of Linwood, Leavenworth Co., Kansas. "It will do all you say, and more. I was taken sick nine years ago. I got so weak I couldn't lie down, nor hardly sit up; and was there two or three months. I picked up one of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the house that was sent for my mother. You recommend it for catarrh of the stomach, so I went to taking it. One bottle nearly cured me. I got two bottles next time and took one and a half, and was well. Your medicine cost me three dollars and the doctor cost me fifteen dollars."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps, to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mark Twain on Mines.

(From Mines and Minerals.)

So many stories are now floating in the daily press about lost mines, and wonderful new discoveries, that it may not be out of place to reprint some remarks of Mark Twain on the subject of rich gold deposits, which originally appeared forty odd years ago in the California paper he was connected with:

"I have just seen your dispatch from San Francisco in Saturday evening's Post," wrote Mark, "about gold in solution in Calistoga Springs, and about the proprietor having extracted 1,600 ounces of gold of the utmost fineness from two barrels of water, during the past fortnight, by a process known only to himself. This will surprise many of your readers, but it does not

FREIGHT ON EXHIBITS.

The Association undertakes the payment of the inward freight charges on exhibits from the largest shipping point in Manitoba or Northwestern Territories, provided that such exhibits are returned to the original shipping point, freightage on the Fair without ownership changing hands. But the Association is not to be held responsible for the payment of the inward freight charges on exhibits that have been done this year owing to the partial failure of last year's crop and the consequent shortage of money among the exhibitors.

The payment of the Association of inward freight charges applies from points in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories only.

There are as many shapes of "Slater Shoes" as there are forms of feet—this means that no matter what shape, size or width your foot may be, a "Slater Shoe" can be made to fit it comfortably. "Slater Shoes" are modeled from the living 20th century foot—with all its distortions and peculiarities. No other shoe is made with so much regard for feet as the "Slater Shoe." With its foot fitting

The Canadian mounted police and detectives set about to unravel the mystery. All of the young men were Americans, but nationality counted for nothing. The authorities believed a crime had been committed and they were determined to bring the guilty parties to justice. All the trails in the vicinity of Minto were thoroughly searched; every person in the vicinity at the time was questioned, and those who acted suspiciously—O'Brien among them—were taken into custody. There had been heavy falls of snow, but an attempt was made to locate the scene of the supposed murder. One hundred and ten days were spent in determining where the outrage had been committed. It was thought that the bodies had been dropped into the river, and three acres of ice were blown up in the hope of finding them. Detectives came out to the states and descended the river to the Koyukuk, Nome and St. Michaels. The pursuit was vigorous and without interruption.

Having satisfied themselves that O'Brien was the man it became necessary to prepare for his prosecution. Here the same thoroughness was displayed. Eighty witnesses were summoned, one being brought 5,000 miles. Over a year was spent in collecting evidence in both Canada and the United States; and after a trial of thirteen days an expense of more than $100,000 the accused was found guilty and given the extreme sentence—death by hanging.

The Canadians may be slow about some things, but they are not so when it comes to hunting down criminals and giving them their deserts.

CAPITAL HANGS BACK

A district may show a hundred admirable prospects and yet be unable to attract the favorable notice of a single capitalist, but let one of these prospects be developed into a dividend-paying mine and see how soon the other ninety-nine become marketable properties, says the Alaska-Yukon Mining Journal. Properties in every camp first go begging and no one can be found who is willing to invest a few hundred dollars in developing the prospects, until some man who has been inveigled into chancing money to the development work on some particular claim and by chance uncovers a rich body of ore which makes it dividend-paying. From that moment the fate of the camp is settled. After that money will be readily furnished to develop other claims.

The Herald says that because Garibaldi wore a shirt waist is no reason why the latter-day Canadian should. Maybe not, but who is relying on Mr. G? Personally, if we want to wear a shirt waist we will wear a shirt waist, and if we want to wear a Garibaldi, we will wear a Garibaldi, and precedents can be hanged on the back—Hamilton Post.

The statue of the Scotch stone-mason who became one of the prime ministers of Canada, the late Hon. Alex. Macdon, is now being erected in the park at Ottawa. The enterprise cannot be completed until the crop bulletins begin to appear. Before the seed is in the ground, the travellers are busy and abroad, taking the measure of the coming demand. But our business men prepare for their Manitoba trade every year with increasing confidence. They trust the good land and the industrious farmers to give a profitable account of themselves every season, and make arrangements for business accordingly. When the crop is ready millions of dollars will be required to remove it. This will be furnished chiefly by our eastern banks, whose earnings will be thereby increased and the value of their stocks correspondingly enhanced for their shareholders. Not only will the holders of bank stocks be likely to see that part of their property appreciate as a result of the harvest in Manitoba, but holders of Canadian railway securities will almost certainly have a like experience. Ontario has given a good deal in the way of population and capital to Manitoba, but it is receiving a good annual return on the investment.

GRATIFYING TRADE FIGURES.

Canada's Aggregate Commerce for the Year is Thirteen Million Dollars More Than in 1900.

Ottawa, July 22.—The grand aggregate trade of the Dominion for the fiscal year ending June 30 last, will be $24,000,000, which is $13,000,000 in excess of last year, and last year was by far the largest in the history of the country. The grand aggregate for 1900 was $381,517,231. On the basis of imports entered for consumption and Canadian produce exported, the total trade last year was $358,894,581, as compared with $345,085,171 for the previous year. The exports of Canadian produce for both years by classes were as follows:

	1900.	1901.
Produce of mines	$24,580,252	$24,912,572
Produce of fisheries	11,183,083	10,776,532
Produce of forests	2,042,068	2,042,567
Animals and their products	5,118,897	5,118,897
Agricultural products	2,304,499	2,304,499
Manufactures	11,231,267	11,231,267
Miscellaneous	2,864,601	11,632
Gold and silver	1,670,985	289,977
Total	$103,180,685	$177,624,102

These figures show an increase for the past year of $12,458,734. It will also be noticed that there is an increase of $15,000,000 in the produce of the mines and a substantial increase of exports of manufactures. The figures relative to the exports of foreign produce show that the Canadian shipping routes were more largely patronized last year than ever; the exports of foreign farm produce amounted in all to $15,824,542 as compared with $12,101,213 for the year previous.

Mark Twain on Mines.

(From Mines and Minerals.)

So many stories are now afloat in the daily press about lost mines, and wonderful new discoveries, that it may not be out of place to reprint some remarks of Mark Twain on the subject of rich gold deposits, which originally appeared forty odd years ago in the California paper he was connected with:

"I have just seen your dispatch from San Francisco in Saturday evening's Post," wrote Mark, "about gold in solution in Calistoga Springs, and about the proprietor having extracted 1,600 ounces of gold of the utmost fineness from two barrels of water during the past fortnight, by a process known only to himself. This will surprise many of your readers, but it does not surprise me for I once owned these springs myself. What does surprise me, however, is the falling off in richness of the water. In my time it was a dollar a dipperful. I am not saying this to injure the property in case a sale is contemplated. I am saying it in the interest of history. It may be that the hotel proprietor's process is an inferior one. Yes, that may be the fault. Mine was to take my uncle (I had an extra one at that time on account of his patents dying and leaving him on my hands) and fill him up and let him stand fifteen minutes to give the water a chance to settle. Well, then I inserted him in an exhaust receiver, which had the effect of sucking gold out through his pores. I have taken more than $11,000 out of that old man in less than a day and a half.

"I should have held on to those springs, but for the badness of the roads and the difficulty of getting the gold to market. I consider that the gold-yielding water is in many respects remarkable, and yet no more remarkable than the gold-bearing air of Catgut canon up there toward the head of the auriferous range. This air, or this wind, for it is a kind of a trade wind which blows steadily down through six hundred miles of the richest quartz croppings during an hour and a quarter every day, except Sundays, is heavily charged with exquisitely fine, impalpable gold. Nothing precipitates and solidifies this gold so readily as contact with human flesh heated by passion. The time that William Abraham was disappointed in love he used to sit out doors when the wind was blowing, and came in again and began to sigh. He sighed right along and the time that John Hatkinson and Alice Norton quarrelled about Hatkinson's dog, they stood there sweating at each other; and they knew how, and what they didn't know about sweating they couldn't learn from you and me, not by a good deal; and at the end of every three or four minutes they had to stop and declare so divident. If they didn't their jaws would clasp up so they couldn't get big, unsavory ones out at all, and when the wind was done blowing they cleaned just a little over $1,600 a piece. I know these facts to be absolutely true, because I got them from a man whose mother I knew personally. I do not

"Don't you think the dance is going well—is quite a success?" says Mrs. Dyson-Moore gayly. "Such a crush. One doesn't expect to find the wilds. As a rule, country dances do not go to smash. But this one is an exception. You enjoying your self?"

"What a question!" says Ker. "It is a most ordinary answer, yet unfortunately it bears two interpretations. To one for each of the women listening. To Hilary it means a compromise; she had disinclined to look at him, but she feels as if Ker had parried the question with a view to pleasing this detestable little Polly—the silly little Mrs. Dyson-Moore. To the 'silly little woman,' it seems in her vanity a direct declaration that he is not enjoying himself at all—that he could not possibly do so, being separated for the moment from her."

"She turns away, looking back at Ker as she goes and smiling coquettishly. The next is hers. Don't forget," says she, as she moves away.

CHAPTER XII.

"Thank heaven!" says Ker. "For what?" questions Hilary, who is not feeling as sympathetic as usual. "For—" He checks himself abruptly. "Because we are once more alone."

"You must be tired," says she sweetly. "Do you really want to talk? Am I boring you? You have had a long journey. I know."

"What nonsense!" says he. "As if I should mind a few miles by train. He haggard altogether understood her. "Will you sit down here until the next dance begins."

"It must be almost nine, and you have promised it to Mrs. Dyson-Moore."

"So have," he would have a bad "worse luck," but civilization prevents him. "Still there is a minute or two left."

"She makes no answer to this, and the silence growing a little oppressive, he breaks fresh ground."

"How fond you all seem to be of fancy balls down here?"

"Not always! But once a thing is started, you know what a run, then always is on it. It becomes an epidemic. It is one of the measles. It catches all the country."

"We are certainly of the monkey tribe. Such imitative animals! But fancy-dress balls—they must be such a worry!"

"Not greater than others. Look at red hair. Let one woman prevail a crusade on the bewitchingness of it, and all other women will dye their hair like mud. That must be a far greater worry than giving a fancy ball. Because, at all events, the latter permits us—at least some of the fortunate ones of us—to show ourselves at our best for once in a while."

"I don't think that I couldn't have done it. Diana was very angry with me."

"I am very glad you did it," says Ker, with sudden earnestness. "It has made us friends much more quickly. It has taken the chill out of our introduction. Don't you see?"

"Yes, perhaps so." She has seated herself in one of the chairs, and now leans forward to speak to him more earnestly. "She had so arranged her household's gown as to have the sleeves tucked up to the shoulder, as though about to go in once for a severe scrubbing match. This lets her lovely naked arms be seen in all their beauty. She rests them on her knees now and looks up at Ker."

"Do you know I never knew what to say to a partner when first introduced to him?"

"I remember what you first said to me."

"So do I. It was 'forgive me.'"

"No, it wasn't. It was 'A glass of water, sir.'"

"Hilary blushes hotly. "That was not an introduction at all."

"And was the other?"

"No. After all," with a little embarrassed laugh, "I don't think you have ever been introduced to me."

"We must get your sister to do it to-morrow. I may call to-morrow."

"I hope you will come to luncheon. Diana will be very glad to see you."

"And you?"

"I shall be very glad, too."

"Certainly not. I suppose Diana wouldn't allow me to be better to-morrow?"

"That's not," laughing and looking a little confused.

"I'll ask her, however. It would do me good to wait on you this time."

Hilary lifts her eyes to his.

"I wish," he begins, "that Mr. Ker, I wish you would tell me all about that stupid prank of mine."

"She is looking lovely with this new earnestness within her shining eyes, with this soft touch of shyness on her beautiful lips."

"Ker drops into the chair beside her."

"I'll do anything you wish," says he in a low tone. "If you will call me—Fred."

"Fred! Is that your name? Oh! I couldn't call you—Fred. It would be impossible." She rises quickly to her feet.

"Why is it only a week ago since I first saw you?"

"That has got to do with it?" He, too, has risen. "Why can't you, of all people, call me by my name? You might remember that I am you."

"My name?" Hilary gasps. "Hilary goes crimson. What is he going to say?"

"Mr. My? stammering. Her glance has grown cold. She is intensely angry with him; partly because of her unlucky bluntness partly because he has been the author of it."

"You—cousin," answers Ker softly. "He had been going to say something else, her sudden touch of hauteur has prevented him."

"The next dance is beginning," says Hilary, still with her manner distinctly changed. "Mrs. Dyson-Moore will be waiting for you." She moves toward the door of the ball-room. Ker follows her.

"You will give me the answer later on?"

"I am afraid not. My card is quite well."

"I must begin at the beginning, me dear, if I'm to make you understand it. When me nephew, Pether, Kinella, arrived at the ball door, that jackanapes of a footman they have was standing just inside it, with a pencil and paper in his hand, and had the impudence to ask Pether about his introduction."

"His character?"

"Yes, me dear. His character? An' you all know what me nephew Pether is! A regular snowdrift!"

Here she pauses to wipe her eyes, which gives Hilary a chance of retreating behind the Irish Times.

"Dear Miss Kinella," says Diana, gently, "I think the man must have wished to know what costume your nephew was wearing, with a view to putting it in our daily paper and, perhaps, in the Gentlewoman, or some other society paper."

"Yes, me dear. So it seems now, but at first me nephew Pether couldn't understand what he was at, an' you know what a spirit he has, quite bloodthirsty when his honor is called in question!"

"He did, me dear. But Pether was so flabbergasted by that time, that he couldn't remember what he was, so he told the man that he had no character, and that the mistress knew him well!"

Here Hilary gives war, and bursts into a peal of laughter, followed by Diana, who has been growing hysterical.

"Miss Kinella, I hope you will pardon this reprehensible merriment on the part of my wife and my sister," says Clifford solemnly. "No doubt hysteria has a good deal to do with it. No one could hear your harrowing tale without being deeply moved. As for me—" Here, his voice began to shake treacherously, he subsides behind his handkerchief. "When I think of Mrs. McIntyre's face when she heard that," says he. "Such an asperion on her character!"

"Oh, but, me dear, there's worse to come," says Miss Kinella, tearfully, pleased with the sensation she is so evidently creating. "It seems that that scamp of a footman gave me nephew Pether's message straight to Mrs. McIntyre this morning, when she was looking over her list. An' now I hear she is going to take revenge on me poor nephew, and are going to put him in all the papers as 'Thady, yer gander.' As if, here Miss Kinella begins to sob wildly. "Pether would go anywhere without his breeches!"

"It's frightful," says Clifford, who ought to be ashamed of himself.

"You know, the old ones, don't ye, Mrs. Clifford, me dear?"

"Oh, Thady, yer gander. Ye're like a Highland heather. For want o' yer breeches, For want o' yer breeches!"

The old lady chants them in a shaking voice.

"They sound sadly familiar," says Clifford. Both Hilary and Diana are beyond speech."

"Oh! to think of me spotless Pether being so treated," goes on Miss Kinella, distractedly. "—me dear, me dear, you're a great friend of Mrs. McIntyre's. I came to ask would you go up to her, an' beg me nephew Pether off? You could explain to her, me dear, that he never meant it."

"Inspiration seizes on Diana."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," says she. "I'll give you a little note, and you must take it direct to Mrs. McIntyre yourself."

part. But Clifford said something about it, to which Ker had responded with an utterly unbecoming sneer, and then they all laughed. So it had ended.

After luncheon Ker had asked Hilary to show him the pretty garden outside, a glimpse of which could be caught from the dining-room windows, and she had run on a big straw hat, picturesque to the last degree, and brought him out—here.

"After all," says Ker, "I suppose we had better talk about it."

"They are sitting in the little arbor by this time (all overgrown by trailing roses), and a slight rustle had come in the rather hurried conversation that up to this has been carried on between them."

"About—" Her tone is a little faint. Her pretences at ignorance poor indeed.

"I know what you mean," she says, hurriedly, "but it has to be done you see, and you must only try and forgive me. Of course, you have only to say one word, and I'm off to India again to-morrow, and that blessed £18,000 a year may go anywhere you like for all I care. If only your refusal of me would give it to you, I should feel contented. But as it is—"

"Or," says she slowly, looking on the ground, "if your refusal to marry me."

"Well, I haven't refused," says he, tracing a pattern in the gravel with his stick.

"Well, neither have I," says she with a queer little laugh.

"Now, what do you mean by that?" He gets up and stands looking at her.

"I don't know what I mean. Don't stand there staring at me."

She gets up too, and, turning from him, begins to pull a few buds from a long-suffering rose-tree near.

"Was ever any girl placed in so horrid a position?" says she at last, in a very distressed tone. "Never! I think. And what makes it worse for me is that I feel as if I was in fault."

"No, no, you mustn't think that. Surely neither of us is in fault."

"Of course," pulling off another offensive bud. "I could say that one too. Asking herself what she could do is it advisable? Is it too late to withdraw?"

"Does she like him? Like him, that is, well enough to marry him? That is the question."

"Of course, love is out of the question. How her thoughts wander a little, wander about indeed, and lose themselves in a recollection of his eyes—so dark and earnest—his mouth—so firm, so kind, and his hair—how well it sits upon his head, and what a goodly head it has to sit upon!"

"She remembers her face, she has an angry start, and comes back to her question. The bare liking she has for Fred—Mr. Ker—must be the very barest liking, considering how little she has seen of him—would that he strong enough to enable her to live out the whole life with him? Would it entitle her to accept him? Must he be considered as well as she. And would it be just to him?"

herself to thus embark on a voyage that would last all time—all time for them certainly—without some sure thing to go upon."

It is a most vexed question. And there are so few days given in which to think of it. That miserable wife has hushed them into a corner. Only a month in which to decide the woe or the woe of two lives! But she has not well enough to think of it. She has not come back again. And he—does he like her? He had hesitated about coming early to-morrow."

When she wakes to-morrow is here, threatened by another name. A very lovely to-morrow too. All blue sky and tender warmth, followed by the singing of innumerable birds.

Hand and notes in this is miney questions he, tightening his fingers over it.

Hilary makes a little affirmative gesture. A most unsatisfactory one.

"You will be my wife?" asks Ker, more decisively this time. He had disliked that silent assent.

"I will," Hilary answers now is distinct enough, anyway, if ideally cold.

Ker, after a second's examination of her face, stoops and presses his lips to her cheek. It is the calmest kiss on record, yet he has the satisfaction of seeing that it touches her. She grows, indeed, crimson. "She draws back from him, it is true, with a little offended gesture, but in doing so she lets him see her eyes. They are full of tears, and a little quick surprise and indignation, and a new sweet suspicion of sin, but nothing at all of horror, or shrinking, or dislike."

He leaves her, well satisfied. He goes with a light and cheerful step up the road. How beautiful she is! how full of strong, young life. No silly fool! He could not have endured a silly fool, however merry, for that. He has seen in his life he knows himself to be honestly in love. And she—she will come to love him in time. He will be so good to her. His life shall be hers. By-the-by, why can't he get out of this luncheon at the Dyson-Moore's to-morrow? He is busy by the morning train, he could get to York by 11.30, and could there stay at a ring—all girls like a ring, and he would like to give her something. Of course, that would prevent his being with her at three o'clock, as he had arranged. But he could not possibly be there. He is too busy. He has to go to the office of all girls he has ever met, she seems the most reasonable as well as the most beautiful, and the most—etc., etc.

CHAPTER XV.

Half through the night Hilary lies awake, thinking—thinking always of this new, momentous step she is about to take. Asking herself what she could do is it advisable? Is it too late to withdraw?"

Does she like him? Like him, that is, well enough to marry him? That is the question."

"Of course, love is out of the question. How her thoughts wander a little, wander about indeed, and lose themselves in a recollection of his eyes—so dark and earnest—his mouth—so firm, so kind, and his hair—how well it sits upon his head, and what a goodly head it has to sit upon!"

"She remembers her face, she has an angry start, and comes back to her question. The bare liking she has for Fred—Mr. Ker—must be the very barest liking, considering how little she has seen of him—would that he strong enough to enable her to live out the whole life with him? Would it entitle her to accept him? Must he be considered as well as she. And would it be just to him?"

herself to thus embark on a voyage that would last all time—all time for them certainly—without some sure thing to go upon."

It is a most vexed question. And there are so few days given in which to think of it. That miserable wife has hushed them into a corner. Only a month in which to decide the woe or the woe of two lives! But she has not well enough to think of it. She has not come back again. And he—does he like her? He had hesitated about coming early to-morrow."

When she wakes to-morrow is here, threatened by another name. A very lovely to-morrow too. All blue sky and tender warmth, followed by the singing of innumerable birds.

Hand and notes in this is miney questions he, tightening his fingers over it.

Hilary makes a little affirmative gesture. A most unsatisfactory one.

"You will be my wife?" asks Ker, more decisively this time. He had disliked that silent assent.

"I will," Hilary answers now is distinct enough, anyway, if ideally cold.

Ker, after a second's examination of her face, stoops and presses his lips to her cheek. It is the calmest kiss on record, yet he has the satisfaction of seeing that it touches her. She grows, indeed, crimson. "She draws back from him, it is true, with a little offended gesture, but in doing so she lets him see her eyes. They are full of tears, and a little quick surprise and indignation, and a new sweet suspicion of sin, but nothing at all of horror, or shrinking, or dislike."

He leaves her, well satisfied. He goes with a light and cheerful step up the road. How beautiful she is! how full of strong, young life. No silly fool! He could not have endured a silly fool, however merry, for that. He has seen in his life he knows himself to be honestly in love. And she—she will come to love him in time. He will be so good to her. His life shall be hers. By-the-by, why can't he get out of this luncheon at the Dyson-Moore's to-morrow? He is busy by the morning train, he could get to York by 11.30, and could there stay at a ring—all girls like a ring, and he would like to give her something. Of course, that would prevent his being with her at three o'clock, as he had arranged. But he could not possibly be there. He is too busy. "She makes no answer to this, and the silence growing a little oppressive, he looks at her again."

"How odd you all seem to be of fancy balls down here!"

"Not always! But once a thing is started, you know what it runs; then always is on it. It becomes an epidemic. It is worse than the measles. It catches all the country."

"You are certainly of the monkey tribe. Suchimitative animals! But fancy-dress balls—they must be such a worry!"

"Not greater than others. Look at red hair. Let one woman precede a crusade on the becomingness of it, and all other women will dye their hair like mine. They must be very good, and very smart, giving a fancy ball. Because, at all events, the latter permits us—at least some of the fortunate ones, of us—to show ourselves at our best for once in our lives."

"Ah! you can speak," says he, "being one of the fortunate ones."

"I am very ready to be very delightful, of course. But, to Hilary, in her present mood, it saves too much of the zinn of the world, of the word in season-of, in effect, hypocrisy."

"I wasn't thinking of myself," says she, quite calmly.

"You are a very good sort of person, and you should be very glad to be in a very gorgeous apparel,"—here she smiles—"but I hadn't a penny to do it with—I was thinking of Mrs. Dyson-More."

"It was very good of you," says Ker.

"His manner converts to her the belief that he thinks her very good of her, and she has a thought upon her, all but this does not satisfy Hilary. Why didn't he say it?"

"Good of me?" says she; "a sudden desire to make him speak has driven her to this disposition."

"Yes, ~~why~~ should you? Others will not be so ready to ask out of your hands. Many others."

"He laughs, and a vision of Mrs. Dyson-More's very short skirt comes once again before Hilary's eyes. Is he laughing at her? She turns her eyes suddenly on his."

"Are you a friend of hers?" asks she.

"A friend! An acquaintance rather, and," meaningly, "a guest."

"Ah, I see! Your lips are sealed."

"They would be certainly if there was any cause for sealing." He smiles and gives himself a slight shake.

"Have we not had enough of 'Fair' for the evening?" asks he, with a rather comic smile.

"I don't see how I have been foolish," returns she, wittily mis-understanding him. She gives him a little return smile, however, as she says it, which betrays her knowledge of his meaning.

"He feels that "renew with honor" has, for the moment at all events, been restored."

"You foolish! Never," says he.

"Not even—when I—"

"Not even then. One can forgive you for keeping up the masquerade under our peculiar circumstances."

"He regards her steadily, as if wishing her to understand that there is meaning in his words—a desire to approach the delicate subject of the will. Hilary colors faintly, and trifles with the corner of her apron."

"Suppose you wanted to study me?" says she, a little daringly.

"Ah! That was what was so unfair. I know it now. Why should I study you when you had no opportunity of studying me?"

"Yet I had, I had," says Ker, gayly. He laughs as if remembering.

"But not as if you saw me as my proper self."

"Your—other self, was not to be despised. And how do you look when you are your proper self?"

"As I look now, of course."

"What? Do you always go about in a cap and apron?"

"Oh, nonsense! Here they both laugh a little. You saw I had the advantage. I have seen you twice in ordinary clothes, whereas you have never seen me except in this," she pulls at a fold of her gown.

"This is very becoming, agreeable."

"I don't know what else you could say, I'm sure," disconsolate. "And I can't

"I'll do anything you wish," says he in a low tone. "If you will call me—Fred."

"Fred! is that your name? Oh! I couldn't call you—Fred. It would be impossible. Mrs. Hiss is likely to hear that. Why, it is only a week ago since I first saw you."

"What has that got to do with it? He too has risen. 'Why can't you, of all people, call me by my name? You might remember that I am your—'"

"He pauses—purposely perhaps. Hilary grows impatient. What is he going to say? "Mr. My?" stammers she. Her glance has grown cold. She is intensely angry with him, purely because of her unlucky bluntness partly because he has been the author of it.

"Your—cousin," answers Ker softly. "He had been going to say something very sudden touch of hauteur has prevented him."

"The next dance is beginning," says Hilary, still with her manner distinctly changed. "Mrs. Dymond-More will be waiting for you." She moves toward the door of the ball-room. Ker follows her.

"I will give me another later on."

"I am afraid not. My card is quite full."

"Then, till to-morrow," says he, indifferently as it seems to her.

"I shall tell Diana you are coming."

"Our dance, Miss Burroughs," says a gay Hussar at this moment.

CHAPTER XIII.

"Good heavens, Hilary! Here's Miss Kinsella," says Diana, in the hurried, subdued voice we all know, when deprecation is descending upon us. She pounces upon her work—a frisk for the youngest darling—and makes a rapid flight from the window where she has been leaning her head against the room. It is more a movement of impulse than anything else.

"That means two hours," says Hilary truthfully, stopping short in her arrangement of the flowers in the vases.

"And she is coming to dine. You told him."

"He knows it. I say, Di," with a sudden gleam of hope, "let us say we are out."

"Too late. I saw her," and she saw me, as she came up the avenue."

Hilary falls back in her chair.

At this moment a loud rat-a-tat-tat is heard at the back door.

"I suppose there is no safe and sure way of murdering anyone," says Hilary gloomily.

Here the door is thrown open, and Miss Kinsella enters, with all the signs of storm about her, followed by Clifford, who has met her just outside.

"I came in this early," dear Mrs. Clifford, cries the old maid, "because I felt I must speak to you."

Hilary's heart stands still for a moment. Is it anything about her? About that luncheon—or Ker?

"About what, Miss Kinsella?" asks Diana anxiously.

"Why, about Peter?"

Hilary's heart gives a great rebound. She comes quickly forward. She takes old Miss Kinsella's hand, and positively bounces upon her to Diana's intense annoyance.

"Well, Peter," cries Hilary.

"Tell us," Peter says to Hilary, Hilary, Hilary—yes, you know me, nephew, Peter Kinsella—yes, saw him last night, did you, did you, didn't you?"

"Diana, I hope you will be able to say yes to that," says Clifford solemnly.

"The best inform you, is a most important case."

"Yes, yes, of course we saw him," Hilary enthusiastically.

"She is feeling so obliged to this old bore." "He was a sort of Scot, wasn't he?"

"A Highland chieftain," says Clifford, correcting her severely. "Of the very first war."

"Ye're right. Ye're right!" cries old Miss Kinsella, her arms vibrating with excitement. "A Highland chief he was, an' lovely he looked! I couldn't take me eyes off him all night. A mather, me, you know he will have his little straths."

Luna begins to cough, and says, "I can't see why."

Local Interest

Mr. F. J. Bowman returned to Minneapolis Sunday after spending a couple of weeks in the district.

Mr. D. Forrester, barrister of Winnipeg, who has been spending a vacation here returned home Tuesday.

Mr. A. Duff, of the Bank of Montreal, Winnipeg, has been spending his vacation on the lake here.

Mr. C. Macdonald, of Winnipeg, arrived on the campers' train Tuesday to spend vacation.

Miss Cross, daughter of Master Mechanic Cross, of the C. P. R., Winnipeg, is spending the holidays here.

Hon. Wm. Hespler, of Winnipeg, arrived by the campers' train to spend a few days on the lake of the Woods.

Sergeant W. Tennant, express messenger on the trains between Winnipeg and Port Arthur, was married in Winnipeg on Tuesday last to Miss Annie Madden, daughter of Mr. J. Madden, contractor of that city. Mr. Tennant's friends here extend congratulations.

The electrical display this year at the Winnipeg fair will be the best that has yet been seen in the grounds and the buildings. The sidewalks and paths will be outlined with colored lights and the exterior of the main building will be illuminated and outlined with many colored lights. The grounds when illuminated each evening will appear as a veritable fairy-land.

Wright, the Misses A. and M. Young, Creighton, Baker, Rigney, Burrage, Wilson, Franks, Deacon, Stevenson, Gordon, Forrester, and Mrs. W. P. Johnson and Messrs. Heys, Barclay, Coomer, Bolton, Baker, Cuthbert, Young, Wood, W. and D. Stewart, Holland, Griffith, Pender and Burton. After songs and several selections on the cornet, clarinet and guitar refreshments were served. A post-wow was indulged in and Jim Baker gave them a few of his new Fort Frances steps, much to the delight of the bunch.

Mr. A. Strang, of Winnipeg, is in town.

Mr. Jno. Beaudro returned from Wabigoon yesterday.

Mr. Geo. W. Gould and Oscar Valien, of Mikado, are in town.

Mr. Jno. Carroll, of Bigsby Island, arrived in town today with a load of fish. Mr. McCarrall made the journey in a sail boat in a little better than 24 hours.

Mr. Robert T. Cuthbert who has been managing Hotel Minnehaha at Beaudro's Landing, arrived home this morning.

Miss Broatch, of Winnipeg, who has been visiting Miss Allie Johnson, left for her home on Monday.

Mr. Chas. Larson, of Mikado, arrived in town yesterday.

The local regatta which was to take place tomorrow has been postponed for a week. The members should take more interest in the rowing club and try to be on hand for practice every day. This is the only way that success may be attained by any of the rowers.

While several small boys were playing near Mr. J. W. Stone's boathouse on Wednesday one missed his footing and rolled over into the lake. The little fellow sank twice before Mr. Stone noticed him and was just saved by his rescuer plunging in and catching him as he was going down the last time.

Mr. Thos. Heys entertained a number of his friends to a five o'clock tea and a bonfire at night on the island in honor of his birthday Tuesday evening.

The Rowing club dance at the club boat house Wednesday night was a success in every way. Music was furnished by Hanson's orchestra and dancing was indulged in to a late hour.

Messrs. T. R. Deacon and A. S. Cuthbert went out to the Mikado Wednesday returning last night.

There are all kinds of poets nowadays. Here is an 'American' aquatic effusion: "Yankee Doodle built a yacht, to be the cup defender; every time she sailed a race, it took a week to mend her."

Surgeons Blunder Operating for Piles.

The Risk, Pain and Expense of an Operation Avoided by Using Dr. Chase's Ointment—A Minister's Experience.

Too many doctors seem to have a mania for using the knife, and recommend an operation for piles in scores of cases when Dr. Chase's Ointment would effect a thorough and lasting cure. Rev. S. A. Duprau, Methodist minister, Concession, Prince Edward County, Ont., states:—"I was troubled with itching and bleeding piles for years, and they ultimately attained to a very violent form. Large lumps or abscesses formed, so that it was with great difficulty and considerable pain that I was able to stool. At this severe crisis I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, but I had little or no faith in it, as I had tried various remedies before and to no purpose."

"Now, imagine how great and joyous was my surprise to find that just the one box cured me, so that the lumps disappeared, and also the external swelling. I feel like a different man to-day, and have not the least doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment saved me from a very dangerous and painful operation and many years of suffering. You are at perfect liberty to use this testimonial as you see fit for the benefit of others similarly afflicted."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmundson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

been served, the bright little man arose and with becoming childlike modesty said: "I thank you for the kindness you have shown father and mother, and the rest of us. I hope you will always love me as much as I love you." The nice little address was received with hearty applause.

Winnipeg Theatre, Exhibition Week.

The noted Perkins Comedy Co., with the White Hussar Band and concert Orchestra will be the attraction at the Winnipeg Theatre Exhibition week commencing next Monday, July 29th and continuing for the entire week with a change of play at each performance. The opening play will be the laughable Comedy "Why Jones left Home."

The Perkins Comedy Co., travel in their own Palace Pullman Hotel Car and also use a 70 foot baggage car for the transportation of their special scenery.

Outside of the big summer fair, the Perkins Comedy Co. at the Winnipeg Theatre will be one of the big attractions that all visitors cannot well afford to miss.

The Winnipeg Theatre box office is at Barrowclough's music store, 431 Main st., and box readers would do well to remember this and secure their seats during the day and avoid the rush at the theatre at night.

Only a Little Backache.

That is the first unmistakable symptom of diseased kidneys, an ailment which no one can neglect without inviting Bright's disease, diabetes, rheumatism and the most painful and fatal maladies. At the first sign of backache and urinary disorders use Dr. Chase's Kidney Pills and you can be certain of prompt relief and cure. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box.

Increase For Section Men.

Columbus, O., July 24.—The section men on all railroads entering Columbus, with the exception of Norfolk and Western, have been granted an increase of ten cents a day, and have decided not to strike. The men on the Norfolk and Western struck, and their places were immediately filled by men imported here from other quarters.

Wireless Telegraphy in West Indies.

London, July 24.—The Central News understands that the government contemplates the introduction of wireless telegraphy in the West Indies. Trinidad and Tobago will be the first points connected. When the necessary financial arrangements have been made this system of communication will be extended between Antigua and Montserrat at St. Kitts and Nevis.

Loss of Flesh

If you find yourself falling below normal weight there is danger. The use of fish oil can temporarily add fat but will never build up healthy tissues. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food acts through the blood and nervous system and carries new life and energy to every nook and corner of the body. It regulates the various organs of the body, makes the appetite good, adds healthy flesh, and replaces the tissues wasted by disease. Naturally and gradually this food cure restores color to the cheeks, increases the weight of the body and thoroughly overcomes disease.
